THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION

50X1-HUM

1. The Naval Academy in Piran has its headquarters in the Customs Office Building, adjacent to the "Tartini" Theatre. At the present time the Naval Academy has a student enrollment of 138; 70 of these students are enrolled in the Nautical Training Department and the remaining 68 students are enrolled in the Naval Machinery Training Department. Candidates for the Naval Academy in Piran must promise to serve in the Yugoslav Merchant Marine for at least eight years following the completion of their studies. Students from the interior of Yugoslavia are granted an allotment of 1,200 dinars monthly, while students from [redacted] receive no financial assistance during the [redacted] period of their training. 50X1-HUM
2. Students enrolled at the Naval Academy wear blue uniforms, and blue caps adorned with a triangular emblem [redacted] crossed by an anchor, above which is a red star. Every student is assigned a work uniform and a dress or parade uniform, the left sleeve of which carries v-shaped hash marks denoting the class to which the student is assigned. 50X1-HUM
3. Officially there is no political indoctrination course given at the Naval Academy; nevertheless, every student must become a member of the NOJ (formerly the SKOJ)<sup>1</sup> and attend political indoctrination courses and lectures twice weekly.
4. The following individuals are members of the administrative staff and faculty at the Naval Academy in Piran: 50X1-HUM
  - a. Director: Sea Captain Slavko Kavsek, [redacted] former Commander of SEJA,<sup>2</sup> who teaches politics, navigation and seamanship, and English;
  - b. Assistant Director: Sea Captain Stolf, [redacted]
  - c. Sea Captain Lenarcic, a Yugoslav Air Force reserve colonel, who teaches navigation and seamanship, meteorology, oceanography and signaling;
